Excerpt: . music the wild war-cry of Rome s foes, My friends--this honest heart and trusty shield. VIII. I do not now profess to be a saint; All the sad story of a reckless youth, O er which my spirit sickens deadly faint, Is read by Him whom Israel calleth Truth. IX. O Lord ! I tell Thee all about this slave, Because I read men s faces and I see That Thou art tender, true of heart and brave, Crown d with meek sufi ring s saintly majesty. In many ways I have offended God, My soul is well nigh broken with its shame; Yet never on the downcast have I trod, ---Most sinful else, in this I fear no blame. x1. So, Lord, I know full well that Thou canst see Why I should love the simple slave I saved; I know Thou...
